

:2005 AD

In a chilling vision of the Brave New World of Brave New Labour, spinon rubs its crystal balls and focuses on the Labour Government of June 2006...

It's been a long hard slog, these last few years. Who'd have thought that the break-up of Microsoft would have led to all out wars between different factions of technologists, leaving huge swathes of continents cut off from each other? Of course, this meant the end of the 'special relationship' between Britain and what was the US in 2003, and led Prime Minister Brown (that's Mel, of course - no, only kidding)... And that's another story - the coup in late 2002 as, bolstered by the news that the public wanted a Prime Minister who was more honest and didn't grin all the time, El Gordo swept out the old and brought in his good friends Prudence and, er, Sarah, and his amusingly named advisor Ed Balls...

So anyway, here are some of the more interesting runners and riders for the 2006 election...

5. Tony Blair Smooth Tone has been biding his time at the Home Office since the takeover - rumour has it that he's ready to mount a comeback campaign, having convinced senior Party members that he's fit for the job once again. Son Euan's been out of the news since his arrest for gun-running - insiders even suggest that what with the increasing numbers of young people ending up in jail these days, having a son who's doing time may even help his cause.

4. Anne Widdecombe In a remarkable twist to events after the Conservatives' disastrous showing in '01, Widdy surprised everyone by joining the Labour party, and proclaiming Free Love for all. Who can forget her bed in with John Humphrys, live on GMTV, in the middle of Trafalgar Square? She swiftly rose to the dizzy heights of Deputy Leader, and is widely tipped to be Home Secretary in a possible coalition government, given the precarious balance of the current incumbents.

3. Billie After her catastrophic wedding night, when her husband was found naked with a stripper and a certain fat, greasy comedian, Ms. Piper has been working tirelessly from her seat in the House of Lords, given to her as a Life Peerage (Lady Piper of Swindon) in what many felt to be a populist last stand by the outgoing Blair junta. It is said that she has been soliciting a position in the Lower House, and will renounce her title if requested. Although her sympathies are believed to lie with the left, it is not known at this time which Party she intends to stand for. The Monster Raving Loonies and the British National Natural Law Party (a curious amalgam, but one which many see as working, the extremes of one cancelling out those of the other) are keeping tight-lipped about the situation.

2. Jack Straw Having been away from Government for a couple of years, while acting as the Demon Headmaster for BBC television, a comeback is also apparently on the cards for the former student activist. He has his eyes on the Foreign Office, where, we are assured, he can't possibly do any more damage than his predecessors, Robin Cook and Peter Mandelson (in his post '01 third comeback).

1 Tony Benn The Father of the House, since Ted Heath's unfortunate retirement after the 'haircut' incident, has been plotting silently of late. Many reports have had him prancing around the Palace of Westminster late at night, given a new lease of life due to his bionic limb modifications. He is certainly guaranteed a position in the event of a secure Labour win, but the likelihood of this is rapidly diminishing. More likely, he has

In this zine issue:

>> Poster Proposals

>> Special Report

>> Tony's Vision

>> 2005 AD

>> Cash Cow

>> Rant

>> Editorial

SpinZine Issues:

>> Election Date Announced

>> The Lib Dems...Wasted Vote?

>> Labour isn't working?

>> Oi Baldy! ...The Tories

>> Apathy Special

In this zine issue:

>> Poster Proposals

>> Special Report

>> Tony's Vision

>> 2005 AD

>> Cash Cow

>> Rant

>> Editorial

SpinZine Issues:

>> Election Date Announced

>> The Lib Dems...Wasted Vote?

>> Labour isn't working?

>> Oi Baldy! ...The Tories

>> Apathy Special

SpinZine from spinon.co.uk

everything © 2001

Think this is funny?
Recommend it to a friend:

recently been linked with a Channel 4 contract, possibly to replace Ali G as the voice of youth on the Big Breakfast.

BART MALIK

> Send to a friend

[Close the zine]